We are pleased to announce the 2025 Summer Course of the Universidad Internacional Menéndez Pelayo (UIMP), titled "Clinical Embryology: From Normal Embryonic Development to Congenital Malformations":

This course offers an exploration of human embryology, highlighting the developmental processes that shape the human body and the clinical implications when these processes go awry. The program integrates theoretical lectures with interactive case studies and discussions, creating a dynamic learning environment that bridges fundamental science and clinical practice.

We have gathered an outstanding set of speakers: Philippa Francis-West, Domingo Gonzalez-Lamuño, Moises Mallo, Barbara Pernaute, Marian Ros, Miguel Torres and Paul Trainor who will guide participants through cutting-edge topics into both normal and abnormal embryonic development, with a particular focus on congenital malformations, their etiologies, and current advances in diagnosis, treatment, and research.

This course is ideal for graduate and advanced undergraduate students in biology, medicine, and related disciplines, as well as for clinicians and researchers working in related fields. Attendees will gain a robust foundation in human embryology with direct relevance to both research and clinical contexts.

We look forward to welcoming you to Santander for a rich learning and scientific experience in a beautiful coastal summer.

With the support of the Spanish Society for Developmental Biology (SEBD), the CSIC Genome Connection, and Developmental Dynamics.
